Gateway to the Future: Visual Information in a New Age

HYATT REGENCY – ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20 – TUESDAY, MARCH 26, 2002

ART LIBRARIES SOCIETY OF NORTH AMERICA
VISUAL RESOURCES ASSOCIATION
PROGRAM
WELCOME FROM THE ARLIS/NA AND VRA PRESIDENTS

On behalf of the 2002 Conference Planning Committee and the ARLIS/NA and VRA Executive Boards, we take much pleasure in welcoming you to our first joint conference that marks the 30th annual conference for ARLIS/NA and the 20th annual conference for VRA.

St. Louis was the “Gateway to the West” for settlers from the East searching for better homes in the frontier. We will also be exploring the frontier of the digital age during this exciting conference with ten panel sessions, six seminar sessions; nine workshops and two plenary sessions that address the challenging issues that face our culture.

The Conference Planning Committee has pulled out all the stops to welcome you to St. Louis! Led by Co-chairs Marianne Cavanaugh (ARLIS/NA), Betha Whitlow (VRA), Margaret Webster (VRA) and Deborah Ullan (ARLIS/NA), the conference is the culmination of over two years of hard planning.

A special joint convocation at the historic Sheldon Concert Hall and Galleries on Sunday will be one of the highlights of the social scene. The Silent Auction will make a return appearance for Happy Hour on Saturday night preceding the first-ever dinner banquet. The stunning former waiting room of Union Station is the setting for Friday evening’s Welcome Party, which promises to lend a touch of glamour to the festivities of the conference.

A final word of thanks to all our generous donors, listed elsewhere in this program. Without their sponsorships you would not be able to have the type of conference that you have come to expect. Many of our donors are also exhibitors who return year after year and are strong supporters of ARLIS/NA and VRA. We urge you to spend time with them in the Exhibits Hall-Buy their products! Thank them for their donations! We couldn’t do it without them.

Please have a wonderful week at our first joint ARLIS/NA and VRA conference in beautiful St. Louis!

8:00 am – 12:00 pm
WORKSHOP 1: Leadership Workshop for Mid-Career Managers in Libraries & Visual Resources Collections – New York Central

Workshop Leader
Kathryn J. Deiss, Director for Education and Training, Chicago Library System

The goal of this workshop is to help participants acquire an understanding of the concepts and fundamentals of leadership at any level. Participants will learn methods of promoting team building within a rapidly changing environment. They will learn strategies that enable one to facilitate better communication and working relationships in one's primary area of responsibility and with other departments and units of the organization, such as faculty, upper administration, and institutional technology.

Ideally, participants will be able to: 1) apply skills to meet the responsibilities of their present positions; 2) introduce staff and colleagues to the skills they have learned; and 3) call upon the network of colleagues developed through participation in this workshop.

WORKSHOP 2: Digital Image Production – Illinois Central

Workshop Leader
Susan Jane Williams, Visual Resources Curator, Yale University

This hands-on workshop is intended to demystify basic concepts in scanning technology and through the understanding of them, help users define production modes that are best suited for their local applications. Citations to "best practices" documentation and other helpful print and web resources will be provided. Attendees may want to continue to enhance their skills by attending Photoshop™ 101 to learn how to manipulate the scans.

8:00 am – 1:00 pm
Hospitality/Information Desk Open – Marble Desk, Foyer A

9:00 am – 12:00 pm
TOUR 1: Two Usonian Houses by Frank Lloyd Wright
In the suburbs of St. Louis are two Frank Lloyd Wright houses designed for private clients during Wright's Usonian period. They are small homes, meant to be affordable, yet tightly designed down to the last detail. The Kause House in Ebsworth Park, completed in 1951, was recently purchased from the original owner by a nonprofit foundation, and is being restored as a museum. The second, Pappas House, is still home to the original clients, Theodore and Bette Pappas. It was not completed until 1964, after Wright's death. Both houses have maintained all of their original Wright-designed furnishings and decor. Neither house is currently open to the public and will be opened only for viewing by our group.

TOUR 2: The Saint Louis Art Museum

The Saint Louis Art Museum is an excellent, internationally recognized museum with collections from the ancient to contemporary. The building itself is an historic landmark with more than 100 galleries. It was designed by famed architect Cass Gilbert as the Palace of Fine Arts for the 1904 World’s Fair in Forest Park. Standing atop Art Hill, it is the “crown jewel” of the 1,370-acre park.

The Museum’s collections feature more than 30,000 art treasures from ancient times to the present. Highlights include art of the Renaissance by Piero Di Cosimo, masterpieces of Impressionism by Monet and Van Gogh, American art, featuring a gallery devoted to George Caleb Bingham, and other master works of European and Asian art. Accurately detailed period rooms enhance the excellent collection of Decorative Arts.

The tour begins with the Richardson Memorial Library and includes admission to the special exhibition, “John Singer Sargent: Beyond the Portrait Studio,” the choice of a tour of collection highlights guided by an expert, a self-guided audio tour, or free time to visit the galleries and Museum shop.

TOUR 3: Saint Louis on Wheels

St. Louis on wheels departs from the Hyatt Union Station. Included in the three-hour overview of the city: corporate, residential, and ceremonial downtown, near south side historic districts from the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries (Soulard, Lafayette Square and Compton Heights), a glimpse of Tower Grove Park (a National Historic Landmark), the Hill, Forest Park, Washington University, Skinker de Baliviere, the Central West End, Grand Center, and the near north side, including the realities of abandonment, demolition, and the attempt to create new neighborhoods. Sights on this tour will include the Old Cathedral, Old Courthouse, the Wainwright Building (Louis Sullivan), St. Louis Public Library (Cass Gilbert), Westmoreland Place, and the newly created Washington Avenue Loft District.

1:00 pm – 4:00 pm

TOUR 4: Two Usonian Houses by Frank Lloyd Wright

Repeat of Tour 1.

1:00 pm – 5:00 pm

WORKSHOP 3: Project Management

Workshop for Librarians and Visual Resources Professionals – New York Central

Workshop Leader
Kathryn J. Deiss, Director for Education and Training, Chicago Library System

Led by a project management specialist this workshop will offer advice and propose strategies to help directors, curators, and supervisors develop the skills to better meet the responsibilities of their present positions. Workshop participants will acquire new skills to share with staff and colleagues and will develop a network of colleagues from this workshop to call upon.

Participants will learn basic project management processes and concepts. They will be able to define a project in terms of work, deliverables, resources, and parameters; they will learn to devise a timeline and sequence tasks appropriately. They will also gain skills in tracking and managing a project during implementation. Finally, they will learn strategies for engaging other groups within the organization to invest in the project.

WORKSHOP 4: Photoshop™ 101: Enhancing Your Scanning – Illinois Central

Workshop Leader
Mark Braunstein, Visual Resources Librarian, Connecticut College

Adobe Photoshop™ 6.0 appears complex and overwhelming, but its applications for enhancing raw scans is predictable and easily mastered. Two tools (crop and zoom) and three menu commands (sharpen, levels, and curves) will be demonstrated in depth. Three palettes (history, actions, layers and three touch-up tools (clone, lasso, and wand) will be briefly examined. Finally, images will be prepared for web delivery (Save-for-Web menu command) with text added (Type tool). No experience is necessary for this eyes-on workshop, but enrollment in the Digital Image Production Workshop is recommended.

WORKSHOP 5: Photoshop™ 201: Advanced Image Manipulation – E. Des Lee Technology and Learning Center (Suite 100), Marillac Hall, University of Missouri-St. Louis

This workshop is generously sponsored by the University of Missouri-St. Louis.

Workshop participants will meet their guide to UMSL at the Local Information/Hospitality Desk at 12:30 pm.

Workshop Leader
Fritz Vandover, Washington University, St. Louis

Technical Support
Eric Schwab, Asst. Director, Knight Visual Resources Facility, Cornell University

This advanced hands-on workshop will explore the features of Adobe Photoshop™ in detail, with an emphasis on concepts relevant to the art information specialist, including digital image editing techniques for the production of archival images, creating web-ready images, and automation techniques to speed up image processing time such as writing macros and executing batch processes. The workshop will also address the design of web graphics for professional web sites.

TOUR 5: Missouri Botanical Garden

This tour provides an opportunity to view the world-renowned Missouri Botanical Gardens, and tour its state-of-the-art libraries and herbarium. Opened to the public in 1859 by prominent businessman Henry Shaw, the Garden covers over thirty acres and is exceptional for its horticultural, landscape, and architectural features. Highlights include The Linnean House (the oldest continuously operating greenhouse conservatory in the United States, containing the Garden’s camellia collection, in bloom during our conference), the Cherbonnier English Woodland Garden (which we will visit during its peak season of interest), the Selwa-en Japanese Garden, the Blanke Boxwood Garden, the Grigg Nanjing Friendship Garden (considered the most authentic of its size in the United States), The Climatron (housing 1,200 species of plants in a natural, tropical setting), and the Monsanto Center, a model of “green architecture” that houses the herbarium and library.

Our tour of the Monsanto Center will include a visit to its libraries, which support the most aggressive and geographically widespread plant research programs in the world. The Herbarium contains nearly 4.8 million specimens of pressed, dried plant specimens mounted for permanent storage and reference.

WORKSHOP 6: Building Relational Databases – NY Central
Workshop Leader
Ben Kessler, Director, Visual Resources Collection, Department of Art, University of Chicago
Curators and librarians new to database design may be confused about some of the fundamental issues about relational structure. This workshop will begin with a "blackboard" session which will provide a simple overview of database theory, relational structure, the use of primary and relational keys, the mapping of one-to-many relationships, and a brief look at SQL (Standard Query Language). The second part will be an online exercise in the creation of a small relational database using elements of the VRA Core. This will be conducted using MS-Access™, but the emphasis will be on the generic issue of database construction rather than on any given software.

WORKSHOP 7: More Fundamentals for New Visual Resources Curators – Burlington
This workshop is generously sponsored by the Department of Art and Art History at Rice University.

Workshop Leaders
Karin Whalen, Visual Resources Curator, Reed College, and John Taormina, Curator of Visual Resources, Duke University
This workshop—a follow-up to the visual resources workshop offered at the 2001 VRA Annual Conference in Chicago—is designed for new visual resources curators and librarians.
It will introduce them to the fundamentals of visual resources management and offer guidance in the effective administration of an image collection in the digital age. This workshop will focus on personnel issues, circulation and reference, facilities and space planning, and policies and procedures.

The Department of Art and Art History at Rice University recognizes the importance of continuing education opportunities in the field of visual resources and sponsors this workshop as a prelude to the forthcoming Summer Institute for Visual Resources to be held at Rice University in the summer of 2003.

8:00 am – 1:00 pm
Hospitality/Information Desk Open – Marble Desk, Foyer A

8:00 am – 5:00 pm

An excellent example of Frank Lloyd Wright’s Prairie Style, The Dana-Thomas house was completed in 1905 for Susan Lawrence Dana, a widow from a prosperous mining family. The meticulously preserved and restored Dana House contains some of the best examples of Wright’s interior decorations; in fact, it houses the largest collection of art glass and free-standing furniture of Wright’s public houses, with all of the decorations original to the home. A rare Prairie-era building with gables, the Dana House is also one of only four Wright houses with a plaster frieze, in the manner of Wright’s early employer Louis Sullivan. While this is not Wright’s largest home, it is widely known to be the most skillfully decorated, including exceptional examples of art glass, furniture, murals, metalwork, sculpture, and pottery. Adding to the mystique of the home is its unique owner, whose many marriages, diverse interests (including those in photography and mysticism), and enthusiastic patronage of Wright resulted in what many consider to be his best Prairie Style work. This tour will also visit the home owned and occupied by Abraham Lincoln before his presidency. Operated by the National Park Service, the home and the surrounding neighborhood is completely restored to its mid-nineteenth century appearance, much as Lincoln would have viewed it. Tour Includes lunch.

9:00 am – 1:00 pm
TOUR 7: Cahokia Mounds World Heritage Site

The remains of the most sophisticated prehistoric native civilization north of Mexico are preserved at Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site. Within the 2,200-acre tract lie the archaeological remnants of the central section of the ancient settlement that is known today as Cahokia. In 1982, UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization) designated Cahokia Mounds a World Heritage Site for its importance to our understanding of the prehistory of North America.

This area was first inhabited by the Indians of the Woodland culture in approximately 700 C.E. By about 900 the Cahokia site was the regional center for the Mississippian culture with satellite settlements around it. After about 400 years, the population began to decline, and the site was entirely abandoned by 1500. In the late 1600s, the Cahokia Indians, a subtribe of the Illini, came to the area, and it is from these later Indians that the current name is derived. However, it is the building accomplishments of the earlier Indians that make this site significant. Originally, there were over 120 mounds. Today, about sixty-eight are visible within the 2,200-acre tract. Monk’s Mound, named for the French Trappists who lived on top of it in the eighteenth century, covers an area of fourteen acres and rises in four terraces to a height of 100 feet. Atop this would have been a massive building another fifty feet high. As the largest prehistoric earthen construction in the Americas, Monk's Mound is a testament to the sophisticated engineering skills of these people.

TOUR 8: Laumeier Sculpture Park
Laumeier Sculpture Park, a 100-acre St. Louis County park, was founded in 1976 for the collection and display of monumental contemporary sculpture. Besides including multiple free-standing sculptures, the park houses many early and groundbreaking examples of site-specific sculptural installations. The outdoor collection of over seventy sculptures includes works by Dennis Oppenheim, Donald Judd, Mary Miss, Andy Goldsworthy, Ernest Trova, Beverly Pepper, Anthony Caro, and Mark di Suvero. The Laumeier Museum holds exhibitions throughout the year, covering the full range of contemporary media-sculpture, drawings, paintings, ceramics, video and photography—and including works by artists of international stature.

11:00 am – 2:00 pm
TOUR 9: Architecture Transformed—Restoration and Adaptive Use in St. Louis
This tour offers a glimpse at some of the diverse ways in which new life has been given to old buildings in St. Louis, and is designed to augment a conference session addressing adaptive re-use in St. Louis. The examples evoke the spirit of old buildings and maintain their form to varying degrees, while adapting them for new activities. All are united by the belief that structures from another age can be eloquent vehicles for the shelter and expression of contemporary life. This Metrolink tour will visit several recent examples located in the downtown and will be led by a knowledgeable guide from Landmarks Association who will discuss the history of the properties and significant aspects of their revival. Tour will begin in the Hyatt Union Station and end at Laclede's Landing and the Eads Bridge. A copy of a Landmarks publication on Laclede's Landing will be given at the conclusion of the tour, and guests will be allowed to explore this area via Metrolink at their own leisure. A Metrolink day pass will also be included as part of the tour fees. Specific sites may include the Hyatt Union Station, the Westin Cupples Station, the Washington Avenue Loft District, the Breckenridge Sheraton Suites Hotel, the Wainwright Office Building (Louis Sullivan), the Eads Bridge, and Laclede's Landing.

1:00 am – 5:00 pm
WORKSHOP 8: Common Ground: Implementing the VRA Core in an Image Collection Management System – NY Central
This workshop is generously sponsored by the Saint Louis Art Museum.

Workshop Leaders
Elisa Lanzi, Director of Image Collections, Smith College and Ann Baird Whiteside, University of Virginia

Introduction
Linda McRae, University of South Florida and Lynda White, University of Virginia
This workshop is the practicum component of the series, "the Common Ground," which also includes a panel session and seminar. The workshop leaders will demonstrate how the issues of data structure, data values, and access points that will be discussed in the session and debated in the seminar can be implemented. Topics include: the adaptation of the VRA Core categories to a database structure; conversion of VRA Core concepts into fields and authority files in a relational database; use of online authorities in supporting descriptive cataloging choices. The workshop leaders will demonstrate these concepts with examples from a prototype version of a collection management system. Participants will receive a workshop packet that includes: data structure diagrams, a resource list, and sample records.
WORKSHOP 9: Public Speaking Without Fear & Trembling – Burlington
Pat Wagner, Library Management Consultant, Pattern Research, Denver, CO

Do you find public speaking difficult? Do you avoid bibliographic instruction because it requires addressing a group? Do you find that although you know the material, self-consciousness keeps you from speaking as effectively as you would like when you stand in front of a group? This workshop will show you how to employ your voice properly, connect more immediately with your audience, and speak more confidently in public.

TOUR 10: Escape from the Urban Jungle—Saint Louis Parks
St. Louis is a city with a rich tradition of preserving and promoting its magnificent public parks. From its first urban park, located in the historic Lafayette Square neighborhood, to the vast landscapes of Forest Park, one of the largest urban parks in the nation and the site of the 1904 World’s Fair, St. Louis offers much to its visitors in the wealth and diversity of its parks. These parks include Lafayette Park, Tower Grove Park, Forest Park, Tilles Park, Queeny Park, and Faust Park.

2:00 pm – 5:00 pm
TOUR 11: Mercantile Library and Western Manuscripts Collection
Established in 1846 by civic leaders and philanthropists, the Mercantile exists today as a vibrant cultural asset. It is the oldest library west of the Mississippi and includes a vast collection of American studies materials focusing on Westward Expansion, Western Americana, and subjects related to the general humanities (especially history, world travel, and exploration), the social sciences, and the history of natural sciences and technology. The collection contains 210,000 books, the Barringer Collection of American railroad history, the Pott Waterways Collection of river history, and the “morgue” to the now defunct St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which includes 200,000 black-and-white photographs.

SESSION 1: Adaptive Reuse: the Cornerstone for the Revitalization of St.
Louis – Grand Ballroom A, B

This session is generously sponsored by
Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum

Moderator
Joy Kestenbaum, Pratt Institute

St. Louis is a showcase for a number of significant adaptive reuse projects that either have been completed or are in process, preserving its architectural heritage and maintaining the visual variety and vitality of its neighborhoods. An interesting venue through which to study this phenomenon, the city has been in the forefront of adaptive reuse. This session will focus on Union Station, one of the largest commercial reuse projects in the country, the Cupples Station warehouses, and the adaptations of the United Hebrew Temple into the library facility of the Missouri Historical Society and of Eric Mendelsohn’s B’nai Amonna Synagogue into the Center for Contemporary Arts.

Speakers
Carolyn Hewes Toft, Executive Director,
Landmarks Association of St. Louis, Inc.
Steven Miller, Managing Partner, St. Louis
Station Associates
Andrew Trivers, Architect, Trivers Associates
Karen Goering, Executive Vice-President,
Missouri Historical Society

2002: GATEWAY TO THE FUTURE # PAGE 33
SESSION 2: Common Ground: Standards for Cataloging Images and Objects – Regency Ballroom C

This session is generously sponsored by Library Associates.

Moderators
Linda McRae, University of South Florida, and Lynda White, University of Virginia

In the 1970's and 1980's when technology made the automation of bibliographic records possible, the library community was able to adapt manual procedure and convert paper records to electronic databases because an established format for bibliographic records already existed. In the 1990's when the World Wide Web became the information tool of choice, the bibliographic community once again was able to take advantage of a standard data structure, eventually turning MARC tags into HTML. Common descriptive standards and authority tools enhanced record consistency making access to bibliographic records relatively dependable. It has been argued that a book is not a work of art (or an image of a work of art), and that the differences are so great that comparisons are useless. While acknowledging that cultural objects come with their own set of unique issues, this session seeks not for the differences but for the similarities—the common ground. Are there common tools that we can share and common principles that we can adapt? This session will explain why standards are necessary for successful access; it will identify the types of tools and resources needed to enhance access; and it will review bibliographic tools and resources to examine how they might be used for and adapted to image/object cataloging.

In the accompanying seminar, we will examine the needs of the image/object cataloging communities (e.g., visual resources and museums) to discover whether they are so different from those of the library community that new standards must be created (e.g., CDWA, VRA Core) or whether those standards that have been in effect for years in the library community can be used or adapted by image/object catalogers (e.g., MARC, UK's adaptation of AACR for images). This seminar focuses on specific issues related to providing access to images and works of art and architecture that may or may not be improved by the application of standards already available in the library community.

Meet Me in St. Louis Welcome Party – Great Hall of the Hyatt Union Station

This event is generously sponsored by the St. Louis Mercantile Library at the University of Missouri—St. Louis, and the ARLIS/NA and VRA Chapters.

Come join your friends and colleagues in the magnificent Great Hall of Hyatt Union Station for a trip back to 1894 and St. Louis in the Gilded Age, when this sumptuous former waiting room opened to a party of 20,000 guests. This cocktail reception under the Great Hall's gilded arched ceiling will include the distribution of ARLIS/NA and VRA travel awards, as well as a welcome and introduction from John Neil Hoover, director of the historic Mercantile Library and an important sponsor of this reception.

TOUR 12: Principia College Historic District and the Architecture of Bernard Maybeck
The Principia was founded in 1898 by Mary Kimball Morgan as a school for Christian Scientists. Quickly outgrowing their original space, in 1923 the San Francisco architect Bernard Ralph Maybeck was retained to develop a new site for the college in Elsah, Illinois, east of St. Louis overlooking the Mississippi river bluffs. The design and construction of Principia College was the largest commission in Maybeck's career, helping to keep his firm afloat during the Depression. Although Maybeck designed several other communities on the scale of the Principia campus, the Principia campus is the only such project to be built. Of the thirteen original buildings designed by Maybeck and constructed between 1931 and 1946, eleven survive on the campus and make up the Principia College Historic District. In 1993 the College was designated as a National Historic Landmark. The Historic District is the heart of an active Christian Scientist campus that is usually closed to the public.

TOUR 13: Speaking to the Dead: Historic Cemeteries of Saint Louis
This tour will explore historically significant St. Louis cemeteries, focusing on Bellefontaine and Calvary Cemeteries. Both were established in the mid-nineteenth century as part of the rural cemetery movement and are fine examples of landscape art. Reflecting the religious and ethnic diversity of the city, St. Louis cemeteries are full of interesting personages and monuments.

PLENARY SESSION 1: NINCH Copyright
Town Meeting: "The Changing Research and Collections Environment: The Information Commons Today" – Regency Ballroom
This plenary session is generously sponsored by Grove's Dictionaries and NINCH.
This session is open to the public.
This meeting will focus on the history and meaning of the "information commons," a term used to describe the various free and open public resources of information, and how that concept intersects with licensing.
one of the prevailing mechanisms for distributing digital resources today.

This 3-hour plenary session, co-organized with the National Initiative for a Networked Cultural Heritage (NINCH), is part of an ongoing series of Copyright Town Meetings held across the nation since 1997. The Town Meetings balance expert opinion and audience participation in discussions of the basics of copyright law, the implications of copyright online, recent changes in copyright law and practice, and practical issues related to the networking of cultural heritage materials.

A. Introductions
Kathe Albrecht, Visual Resources Curator, American University and Roger Lawson, Administrative Librarian, National Gallery of Art, "Welcome & Introductions"

David Green, Executive Director, NINCH, "This Meeting in Context"

B. The Information Commons Today
Moderators

TOUR 14: The Pulitzer Foundation

This tour will visit Pulitzer Foundation, which opened in the fall of 2001. This new facility, designed by the architect Tadao Ando, revives the early twentieth century trend of creating intimate, personal spaces for privately owned collections popularized by Albert C. Barnes and Isabella Stewart Gardner. The new facility will feature pieces from Pulitzer’s private collection—including works by Rodin, Miro, Warhol, Monet, and Picasso—that have not been publicly displayed in over a decade. New works by Elsworth Kelly and Richard Serra, commissioned for the opening of the foundation, are also on display. Guests on this tour will also enjoy walking around the Grand Arts District, and viewing late-stage construction on the Forum for Contemporary Art, designed by Brad Cloepfil of Allied Works/Portland and scheduled to open in Fall of 2002.

11:30 am – 1:30 pm

SEMINAR 1: Me, Myself and I: the Solo Professional – New York Central
Moderators
Eumie Imm-Stroukoff, Georgia O’Keeffe Museum, and Paul Glassman, New York School of Interior Design
Many art, architecture, design, and visual resources librarians work within settings or institutions in which they are, if not the only library staff member, then at least the only professional. Often the library is small, sometimes it does not contain extensive holdings or resources, and in many cases the librarian is expected to wear many hats, serving a variety of constituents and fulfilling a broad assortment of duties. Several management techniques can enrich, strengthen, and sustain the experience of the solo librarian; they include: understanding the corporate culture of the institution, defining customer service standards; participating in financial planning and budget development; and advocating for and promoting the mission of the library.

Participants
Susan Baerwald, Library Director, Hellmuth, Obata + Kassabaum
Joan M. Benedetti, Librarian Cataloger, Los Angeles County Museum of Art
Maryly A. Snow, Librarian, Architecture Visual Resources Library, University of California, Berkeley
Pat Wagner, Library Management Consultant, Pattern Research

The World’s Fairs represent "the gateway to tomorrow" filled with all the latest and greatest the world has to offer in design, architecture, technology, and culture as well as the promise of what is yet to come. Saint Louis came to represent not only the gateway to the Westward Expansion but in many ways became the portal to the New World. The photographic documentation and material generated by this world's fair and others provide an excellent vehicle to celebrate the historic joint ARLIS/NA and VRA conference—"the Gateway to the Future: Visual Information in a New Age."

Moderators
Laura Schwartz, University of Texas at Austin and Ellen Petraits, Washington University

This session will demonstrate how St. Louis was a frontier for women artists of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Panelists will describe how St. Louis was a training ground and rewarding work environment for the woman artist. They will also examine the relationship of women artists of the nineteenth century active in St. Louis to those of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. What were the challenges they faced and how are they different for women working in the area today? Who were the patrons of the women artists of yesterday and who are the patrons of today and tomorrow?

Speakers
Joan Hall, Professor of Art, Washington University, St. Louis, "Experimental Printmaking and Papemaking"

Karen Goering, Vice-President, Missouri Historical Society, "St. Louis Women Artists: 1818-1945"

Nancy Kranzberg, Private Collector, St. Louis Philanthropist, and Community Volunteer, "The Arts are Alive in St. Louis – A Collector’s Perspective on St. Louis Women Artists"

The goal of this session is to explore the early history of image collecting and the use of images in higher education. It will focus on four image formats: lantern and 35mm slides; plaster casts after original sculpture; study photograph collections, and architects' books. Particular emphasis will be placed on the socio-economic factors underlying the production and dissemination of visual copies. The tales told in this session are critical to the reconstruction of the values, ethics, prevailing notions of ownership, and educational imperatives governing the relationships between museum stewardship and the dissemination of cultural heritage materials for use in higher education.

Speakers
Anne Blecksmith, Visual Resources Curator, University of California, Irvine, "Virtual Volumes: Early 20th Century Architects Books’ Pamela Born, Slide Librarian, Tufts University, "The Canon is Cast: Plaster Casts and the American Museum"
Martha Mahard, Curator of Historic Photographs, Harvard University, "Berenson Was Right: the Formation and Development of the Photographic Collections for the Study and Teaching of the History of Art"

SEMINAR 2: Negotiating Power: Online Journals and the Art Librarian – Illinois Central

Moderator
Cara List, University of Oregon

Art and architecture librarians often negotiate resource selections with user needs in mind. A critical example of this form of negotiation is with e-journals and other digital research tools. As our colleagues in science libraries have learned, negotiating power means having the ability to understand the complexities of licensing agreements, communicating the needs of our users, and upholding the rights of our institutions. While the publication of e-journals has proliferated in other fields of study, art and architecture journals have been slowed by the special challenge of providing access to images. As information providers address this challenge, librarians can help to shape this effort by letting providers know what we and our patrons need and expect.

Join us as speakers representing libraries, access providers, and publishers present the challenges of providing access to art and architecture journals online, offer ideas about how information professionals at all levels can be involved, and how we can include our faculties in communicating what the scholarship requires.

Convocation – Sheldon Concert Hall and Galleries
This event is generously sponsored by the Getty Research Institute.
Buses will depart from the 20th Street Entrance.
Designated by the renowned 1904 World’s Fair Architect Louis Sperling and built in 1912, the acoustically-flawless, curved wood theatre of the Sheldon Concert Hall (known as "The Carnegie Hall of St. Louis") has played host to hundreds of renowned performers and speakers including Albert Einstein, Ernest Hemingway, and Joan Baez.

Members of ARLIS/NA and VRA will gather here to honor our distinguished service award recipients and the winners of the writing and research awards for both organizations. Following the awards presentation, we will move to the Sheldon Art Galleries, where we will celebrate our joint conference with a heavy hors d’oeuvres cocktail reception. Browse the Sheldon’s five galleries devoted to exhibitions on St. Louis artists, the history of jazz, photography, children’s art, and architecture; marvel at the Sheldon’s collection of stained glass windows and terra cotta architectural details; or simply enjoy the sunset and the view of midtown St. Louis from the elegant Louis Sperling ballroom.

SEMINAR 3: Cataloging Outside the Canon: Cataloging African Art – Illinois Central

Moderators
Eileen Fry, Indiana University, and Marcia Stein, Museum of Fine Arts, Houston

Many of us in visual resources are grappling with developing image collections of non-Western materials. Art survey classes in Africa, Oceania, and the Americas are joining the traditional Western and Asian surveys. Some of us have had little, if any, training in dealing with the considerable problems of creating descriptive cataloging schemes that treat as art, objects which would be classified as decorative or material arts in western schemes. We will discuss possible solutions to the problems encountered in attempting to incorporate African art into existing schemes or in creating new, but VRA Core compatible systems.

Participants
Carole Pawloski, Visual Resources Librarian, Eastern Michigan University
Jackie Spafford, Visual Resources Curator, University of California, Santa Barbara
John Nunley, Curator of the Arts of Africa, Oceania, and the Americas, Saint Louis Art Museum

10:30 am – 12:30 pm
SESSION 7: Changing Identities/Changing Environments – Regency C

Moderator
Elisa Lanzi, Smith College

The digital revolution has created various dilemmas for art information professionals. Our once clearly delimited environments and identities are challenged daily as we struggle to incorporate new users, technologies, and colleagues. This session will feature presentations from participants who are seasoned veterans of change and re-invention. The speakers will address such timely topics as: the new digital workforce; re-inventing ourselves; multiple solutions for change; strategies for integrating new technology; and how to turn every interaction into an opportunity.

Speakers
Cate Cooney, Marquand Library of Art and Archaeology, Princeton University, "Changing Environments: What if there is no box?"
Christina B. Updike, Visual Resources Specialist, James Madison University
Carole Ann Fabian, Applied Arts Librarian, University at Buffalo, "Architects of Change: Building Bridges not Silos"
Judy Thomas, Director of Library Digital Media Center, University of Virginia

SEMINAR 4: Buried Treasure: Artists' Files in the Digital Age – New York Central

Moderators
Erika Dowell, Indiana University, and Terrie Wilson, Michigan State University

Artists' files are perhaps the greatest untapped resource in art libraries today. These files can be an invaluable resource for biographical information, exhibition history, and images; they are a particularly rich resource for information on local and regional artists. This session will begin with short introductions to different strategies for bringing the "buried treasure" in artists' files to light. Speakers' topics include: adding records for artists' files to an OPAC, using the RLG Cultural Materials Initiative to assist with a digitization project, digitizing slide collections of local, regional, or faculty artists, developing a low-tech web-based database of artists' files, and post-implementation issues for online artists' files. We hope that the discussion that follows the speaker's presentations will reveal a variety of projects and perspectives to inspire institutions of all sizes to make their artists' files available to a larger audience.

Participants
Ann B. Abid, Head Librarian, Ingalls Library, The Cleveland Museum of Art
Kathleen Adrian, Assistant Curator, Visual Resources Collection, History of Art Department, Johns Hopkins University
Sam Duncan, Associate Librarian, Amon Carter Museum
Thomas Jacoby, Retired Art & Design Librarian, University of Connecticut at Storrs

11:00 am – 1:00 pm
SESSION 8: "Hey now, what's that sound, anybody know what's going on?" – Grand Ballroom B

Moderator
Henrietta Zielinski, Bibliographer, John M. Flaxman Library, School of the Art Institute of Chicago

The art form most silent is sound. This session will attempt to answer the question, can sound art be distinguished as an art unto itself or is it only seen as occupying a multitude of functions coupled with other media, both static and time-based? This session proposes to look at sound culture, sound art, sonic practices and digital sound production. Sound will be defined by its content and meaning and in its differential to music and musical expression. Sound is connected to time arts (video and film), performance art, and the visual arts, but it remains almost UNHEARD to think about sound separated from these other media. Sound is perceived through the "absence of obstructive anatomical features" yet it fails to make enough of an impression to gain attention for itself.
Participants

1:00 pm – 3:00 pm
This plenary session is generously sponsored by Rice University under the auspices of the Vice President & CIO and the Executive Director of the Digital Library Initiative.

Moderator
Katharine Martinez, Herman and Joan Suit Librarian, Fine Arts Library, Harvard University

In this plenary session, the formal presentation format has been abandoned to accommodate discussion on the three V's of the growing digital environment – Visual Technology, Visual Culture, and Visual Literacy – from panelists representing various roles in the creation, use, and delivery of digital image products. Each of the panelists will first present a brief overview of their digital image products, projects, or educational and administrative pursuits. Following the presentations, the session moderator will pose a series of questions to the panelists about the digital environment and the 3 V's. The questions will probe the panelists to reveal their opinions about the direction visual technology is going within the realm of Visual Culture (which is concerned with visual events sought by users), while at the same time taking into account Visual Literacy (content base, use and access of visual information). This plenary session is sure to expose the issues, trends, and challenges that are of concern to all visual art professionals administering the growing digital visual culture and preparing users for the next generation of visual technology. Questions from the floor will also be solicited.

Speakers
Jennifer Trant, Executive Director, AMICO (Art Museum Image Consortium)
Max Marmor, Director of Collection Development, ArtSTOR, The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation
Susan Jane Williams, Visual Resources Curator, Art Library, Yale University
Paula Lupkin, Assistant Professor of Architectural History, Washington University School of Architecture

3:00 pm – 5:00 pm
SESSION 9: Architectural Archives: to Web or Not to Web – Grand Ballroom A
This session is generously sponsored by the Design and Applied Art Index.

Moderator
Susan Koskinen, University of California, Berkeley

Architectural records are important as documents of an artistic process. They are also important as records of a society, as tools for the maintenance and renovation of existing buildings, as historical records of buildings that no longer exist, as document of unbuilt designs, and as legal evidence. Architectural archival collections contain those artifacts unique to past and present projects, of special private architectural data, personal notes, renderings and sketches of ideas. It is important to document these collections and make them accessible to patrons and the public. By focusing on specific projects, this session will explore the many issues involved in providing web access to architectural archives.

Speakers
Nancy Thorne, Archivist, Architectural Archives, University of Pennsylvania, "Philadelphia Architect and Building Project"

Ardys Kozbial, Visual Resources Librarian, Frances Loeb Library, Graduate School of Design, Harvard University, "Building a Virtual Archives"

Kelcy Shepherd, Project Director, Five College On-Line Finding Aids Access Project, Special Collections & Archives, W. E. B Du Bois Library, University of Massachusetts Amherst, "Electronic Access to Architectural Collections"

SESSION 10: Stretching the Mold: Standard Cataloging and Special Materials – Grand Ballroom C

This session is generously sponsored by Duncan Systems.

Moderators
Sherman Clarke, New York University, and Sara Harrington, Rutgers University

There is no general U.S. art-cataloging manual. This is mostly because art book catalogers are able to use standard tools such as AACR2 and the MARC 21 formats. However, certain materials such as artist books straddle the line between books and visual materials. The panelists will examine several classes of publications that regularly appear in art library collections that need special treatment to meet the needs of the art historian and artist.

This session will discuss the tools that serve as adjuncts to the general cataloging tools; the speakers will describe how they stretch them and use specialized manuals to accommodate these needs. An introduction will be given to some specialized tools for authority work, e.g., the Union List of Artist Names, the Dictionary of Art, GeoNet, the Index of Christian Art, and the Web in general.

Speakers
Sherman Clarke, Head of Original Cataloging, New York University Libraries, Introduction
Kay Teel, Serials Catalog Librarian and Cataloger for the Arts, Stanford University, "Challenges to Cataloging Artists' Books"
Sara Harrington, Art Librarian, Rutgers University, "Collection Level Cataloging"
Anne Champagne, Head of Technical Services, Ryerson & Burnham Libraries, Art Institute of Chicago, "Cataloging Auction Sales Catalogs"
Maria Oldal, Head of Cataloging and Database Maintenance, The Pierpont Morgan Library, "Cataloging Manuscript Facsimiles"

3:30 pm – 5:00 pm

SEMINAR 5: Is a Picture Really Worth a Thousand Words?: Information Literacy and the Visual Learner – Illinois Central

Moderator
Paul Glassman, New York School of Interior Design

If Johnny can't read, can he find the information needed for an industrial design project? Educators increasingly maintain that "the future of higher education will be determined in large part by how individuals and institutions respond to the challenge of information technology and information literacy." Successful information literacy programs have built institutional support and developed partnerships with faculty. Most of these curricula, however, assume text-centered learning, and few have addressed alternate learning styles, such as the particular needs of visual learners, who may approach the universe of information with entirely different mental processes and assumptions than students experienced in the more verbal aspects of the humanities.

SEMINAR 6: Common Ground: Standards for Cataloging Images and Objects – Grand Ballroom B
This seminar is generously sponsored by the Saint Louis Art Museum.

Moderators
Linda McRae, University of South Florida, and Lynda White, University of Virginia
This seminar will examine the needs of the image and object (i.e., visual resources and museum) cataloging communities to determine whether they are so different from those of the library that new standards must be created and implemented or whether the standards that have long been used by the library community can successfully be used or adapted by image and object catalogers. Specific examples will be used to illustrate the issues that the cataloger faces when providing access either to works of art and architecture or their visual surrogates. Is the application of those standards already available in the library community useful and appropriate or are alternative standards needed?

4:00 pm – 6:00 pm
Hospitality/Information Desk Open – Marble Desk, Foyer A

6:30 pm – 9:30 pm
ARLIS/NA and VRA Anniversary Party – City Museum
This event is generously sponsored by Washington University Libraries and Davis Art Slides.

Buses will depart from the 20th Street Entrance.

The year 2002 marks not only the first ever joint conference of ARLIS/NA, but also important anniversaries for both organizations – VRA is celebrating its twentieth year, and ARLIS/NA its thirtieth! To honor this achievement, and to mark the final evening of our first joint conference, we have arranged a special cocktail reception at the extraordinary City Museum for our members. Please join us at St. Louis' most vibrant and unique downtown attraction that includes a multi-level enchanted forest, a giant aquarium, architectural museum, and museum of oddities. Step back into time and into your childhood as you crawl through the tunnels and trees of the enchanted forest, explore hundreds of yards of mosaic inlaid concrete sculpture, and relax in the wonderful, light-filled spaces of this converted warehouse.

TOUR 16: Church Stained Glass in St. Louis
St. Louis, a historic river town comprised of many nationalities that emigrated here during its 250-year history, enjoys a wide range of religious architecture reflecting its multi-national and religious diversity. Particularly notable are its church stained glass windows. While this tour will highlight many of St. Louis’ architecturally significant churches, it will focus on those with outstanding examples of stained glass by Tiffany and Emil Frei, a Munich-trained artist who moved to St. Louis. There are windows designed for Charles Eames and windows originally displayed as part of the 1904 World’s Fair.

TOUR 17: Cahokia Mounds World Heritage Site
Handicapped Access: The interpretive center is wheelchair accessible. However, the majority of the tour involves steep climbs and walking on unpaved hiking trails.
Repeat of Tour 7.
